Effects of the industrial restructuring process upon labour force in Petroșani Depression

ABSTRACT

The paper synthesizes the aspects regarding the causes underlying the Petroșani Depression regression and the consequences of industrial restructuring process upon labour force. Petroșani Depression was a dezadvantaged zone of its character mono-industrial given by the exclusive development of mining industry which generated a economic restructuring. Even nowadays there is a depency of labour force on the mining industry (40% of the active population works in the mining). The decline of mining economic sector will continue, so the development of new economic activities is a priority for the local administration and for the population of the depression.
